Owaysis thrilled to be making Hallatonfest debut

Owaysis will be making their Hallatonfest debut when they take to the stage to perform a blistering Oasis set next month.

The five-piece tribute band from Northamptonshire will be performing the greatest hits of the brit-pop legends on Friday, 25 August, at the family festival.

With an obsessive attention to detail, the band recreates the real Oasis experience with amazing energy, playing all the classic songs as if they were there own.

Singer Rob Kidd faithfully recreates the authentic sound of Liam Gallagher and admits the band can't wait to get on stage.

"The band is relatively new but we are all accomplished musicians and dedicated to ensuring the Owaysis experience is as close to the real thing as possible," he said.

"We are all really looking forward to playing at Hallatonfest and can't wait to get the crowd singing along with us to some classic Oasis hits."
